About Me

Hi! My name is Logan Skowronski and I am currently a Sophomore in South Lyon, Michigan. As a self-proclaimed history nerd, I am the secretary of my school's Debate team and I also participate in National History Day.

Outside of school, I teach 5th grade Catechism at my church and I am heavily involved within my community. I am part of the iCivics Youth Fellowship, which advocates for equity and wider access to and within Civic Education.

In addition to my affinity for history, I am also quite fond of technology and enjoy website design and management. I run three websites of my own. I also work at Abbey Park at Mill River, a senior living facility near my house, where I assist residents with their technology.

Future Aspirations

For the longest time, my primary career aspiration has been to go into education. If I were to choose this pathway, I would want to teach either Language Arts or American History. As I stated before, I am quite fond of learning about history, so I think this would be a perfect fit for me.

As for colleges, I would want to stay close to home (I want to avoid dorm rooms like the plague). I have had my eye on Madonna and Oakland University, as they are small schools, and my parents (who are both educators) are some of their alumni. They also have good education programs, and Madonna offers an accelerated education masters program.

My Family

My parents are both educators (as I mentioned earlier) and my dad has been teaching Forensic Science, Biology, and Anatomy and Physiology for over 32 years. My mom was a science teacher before I was born, and now works in the Archdiocese of Detroit as a Director of Religious Education. I am an only child (which I honestly quite like), and we love to travel, especially to new and exotic places such as Alaska and Hawaii.

We also have two pets—a dog (Shiba Inu) named Oliver and a bird (cockatiel) named Cujo (yes, he was named after the dog in the Stephen King book.)
